Our Mobile Crisis Management Services program works with individuals that are currently experiencing emotional and/or substance misuse crises by responding to their homes. The program was developed to provide alternative options to 911 response. The team of clinicians and peers work with each individual to develop a collaborative plan to obtain needed services in the community or assist with having the individual go to the hospital. Most times crises can be resolved and the team will provide short-term follow-up to monitor and work towards linkages to services. If an individual does need to be evaluated further in an emergency room, the team facilitates this with the needed services and advocates for the individual at the hospital. This is a field-based program and fluency in languages other than English are a plus. The program operates 8 am to 8 pm Sunday to Saturday, including holidays.
