COVID-19: Lessons from a Pandemic

Results and Lessons from PCORI's COVID-19 Portfolio

October 26 | 10:45 am (ET)

Tune in for this discussion where panelists will highlight findings from their PCORI-funded studies and projects focused on underserved urban communities, healthcare workers, and outpatient care. Panelists will discuss results from PCORI's COVID-related research and engagement portfolios and some of the challenges of carrying out this work in an ever-changing pandemic.

PCORnet-Enabled Responses to COVID-19

October 26 | 1:15 pm (ET)

Plan now to hear an insightful exchange as clinical research and public health experts, along with a representative from the patient stakeholder community, share how PCORnet®, the National Patient-Centered Clinical Research Network has facilitated research to answer important questions related to the pandemic. A focus will be placed on results related to three active projects funded by federal health agencies.

The COVID Pandemic's Unequal Toll: Efforts and Evidence to Confront Health Inequities

October 27 | Noon (ET)

Join us as we examine the unequal impacts of the pandemic and the efforts to respond. Leaders of organizations that implemented and advocated for COVID-19 interventions will share their experiences working with communities and stakeholders in the face of an evolving understanding of—and misinformation about—COVID-19.

Equitable Use of Telehealth Post COVID-19: Learnings and Future Directions from PCORI-Funded Portfolios and Products

October 27 | 1:30 pm (ET)

Telehealth use increased quickly and dramatically at the start of the pandemic. Tune in as experts share impactful findings from PCORI-funded studies and research reviews, including the reflections and expertise of Mei Kwong, JD, a telehealth policy expert, and executive director of the Center for Connected Health Policy. Read how she and her team coped with rapid changes in telehealth policy at the outset of the pandemic and how they worked with policy makers to address patients' diverse concerns.

Explore Our Poster Hall

As you build out your agenda, schedule time to visit our poster hall where presentations highlighting COVID-19-related research and engagement projects will include such topics as:

- COVID-19 and depression & suicidality among adolescents
- Faith community response to COVID
- Vaccination in the HERO Registry community
- Virtual stakeholder engagement during the pandemic

PCORI's Annual Meeting is one of healthcare's most influential events, where researchers, patients, caregivers, clinicians, and like-minded individuals throughout the healthcare community connect to build relationships, engage during key informational sessions, and discover transformative ways clinical research is becoming more patient-centered.

Registration for this spectacular virtual event is free! Reserve your spot today and join us as we reimagine a more patient-centered system of health.
